A LEGEND.

BY WILLIAM C. BRYANT. Upon a rock that high and sheer Itese from the mountain's breast, A weary hunter of the deer Had sat him down to rest, And bared, to the soft summer hir, His hot red brow and sweaty bair.

All dim in haze the mountains lay,

With dimmer vale between, And rivers glimmered on their way By forests, faintly seen; While ever rose a murmuring sound From breoks below and bees around. He listened, till he seemed to hear A voice so soft and low, That whether in the mind or car. The listener scarce might know; With such a tone, so sweet and mild,

"Thou weary huntsman," thus it said, "Thou faint with toil and heat! The pleasant land of rest is spread Before thy very feet, And those whom thou would gladly see Are waiting there to welcome thee."

The watching mother fulls her child.

He looked, and 'twist the earth and sky, Amidst the mountide haze, A shadowy region met his eye, And grew beneath his gaze; As if the vapors of the air Had gathered into shapes so fain

Groven freshened as he looked, and flowers Showed bright on rocky bank, And fountains welled beneath the bowers, Where deer and pheasant drank, He saw the glattering stream; he heard The rustling bough, and twittering bird.

And friends-the dead-in boyhood dear, There lived and walked again: And there was one who many a year Within her grave had lain, A fair young girl, the region's pride-His heart was breaking when she died.

Hounding, as was her want, she came Right towards his resting place, And stretched her hand, and called his name With sweet and smiling face, Porward, with fixed and eager eyes, The hunter leaned, in act to rise. Forward he leaned, and headlong down

Plunged from that eraggy wall; He saw the reche, steep, stern and brown, An instant, in his fall-A fearful instant, and no more-The dream and life at once were o'er.

THE NOTICE.

The 16th inst, was the day designated by common consent on which the debate should be closed on the Oregon Question and the vote taken on the passage of the Notice in the Senate. On that day Mr. Crittenden, of Ke maky, addressed the Senate for the and of the adjustment of our claim by compromise and concession. He was in favor of notice because he thought the danger of collision between the residents in Oregon, and consequently with England, would be believed. Corwin and Haywood, were appointed by much less if the notice were given than if it were not. He also thought the prospect of settlement would be much better after the notice should have been given; the two countries would then feel the necessity of acting definitely upon the matter,—they would feel the that the House recede; this was negatived, 05 to 87, Isanella Wine, of Wayne. fearful responsibility which a refusal or neglect to adjust this matter would bring upon the government that yeas 99, mays 83. should defeat the peaceable settlement of the question. Mr. C., who is represented to be one of the ablest men on the whig side of the Senate, argued in favor of the policy and necessity of giving this notice, with much power and good sense; but he was in favor of having our government settle on the forty-ninth degree, by compromise, and of course fell into the same palpable and ridiculous absurdity, as most of the forty-nine men have, of abandoning all our claims north of forty-nine. and then orging the President to settle the boundary on that line by compromise! How such an abourd idea ever entered the head of a man who has any pretensions to intelligence, is more than we can divine. It we limit our pretensions on the north by forty-mine and then settle by compromise, that compromise bne must of necessity fall far south of that parallel theen, what is right? but, what will England do?probably on the Columbia river, and such a settlement has not yet been advocated by the most timid federalist, or strongest enemy of Oregon; how soon it will be, however, depends entirely upon the pertinacity with which Great Britain shall adhere to that life; nor is there at present the smallest prospect that forty nine could be obtained,—it has been offered by our government, for the sake of peace, four times, and as often rejected, and the last time in a manner little short of insulting. Thus, the only honorable course left for our government is, to assert and maintain our rights to the whole country. Then if we have to fight for this rich territory, far better would it be to fight for all that belongs to us, than in a spirit of timidity [in last week's paper, some of the clamants to beirshin] connelled to fight for, or abanden the balance.

THE MIDNIGHT REVIEW.

PROM THE GERMAN. When Midnight's hour is come. The Drummer forsakes his tomb, And marches, beating his phantom drum. To and fro the ghastly gloom

He plies the dromsticks twain. With fleshless fingers pale. And beats, and beats again, and again, A long and dreary Reveil

Like the voice of abysmal waves Resounds its unearthly tone, Till the dead old soldiers, long in their graves, Awaken through every zone.

And the Slain in the land of the Hun, And the frozen in the icy North, And those who under the burning sun Of Italy sleep, come forth.

And they whose bones longwhile Lie bleaching in Syrian sands, And the slumberers under the reeds of the Nile Arise, with arms in their hands.

And at midnight, in his shroud, * The trumpeter leaves his tomb, And blows a blast, long, deep, and loud, As he rides through the ghastly gloom-

And the yellow moonlight shines On the old Imperial Dragoons; And the Cuirassiers they form in lines, And the Carbineers in platoons.

At a signal the ranks unsheathe Their weapons in rear and van; But they scarcely appear to speak or breathe, And their features are sad and wan.

And when Midnight robes the sky, The Expenor leaves his tomb, And rides along, surrounded by His shadowy Staff, through the gleon.

A silver star so bright Is glittering on his breast; In a uniform of gray and white And a gray camp-frock he is dressed.

The moonbeams shine afar On the various marshalled groups, As the Man with the glittering silver star Proceeds to review his troops.

And the dead battalions all Go again through their exercise, Till the moon withdraws, and a gloomier pall Of blackness wraps the skies.

Then around their Chief once more The Generals and Marshals throng; And he whispers a Word oft heard before

ELLTER, Me., Sept., 20, 1813. This certifies that I have recommended the use of WIS-TAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY for durages of the Lungs, for two years past, and many bottles to me knowledge have been used by my patients, all with benefitial resolts. In two cases where it was thought confirmed a mampton had tahen place, the Wild Cherry effected a runs. E. BOYDEN, Physician at Exeter Corner.

No Quackery! No Deception!

All published statements of cares performed by this medicine, are, in except respect. TRUE.

The unparalleled and amounting efficacy of Dr. Widar's Radam of Will Cherry in all the diennes or which it is reco. enculod, turing many lows after the shall of the less physicians true maraning, has affected a large and rocks using demand for it.
